Teaching Kindness is Essential.

When children don't feel welcomed, included, and physically and emotionally safe, they won't be able to learn. I'm Nicole Black and I create resources to help create a classroom community, to limit bullying behaviors, and to intentionally help kids speak and act with kindness more often.

Kindness can be taught. This resource will help you do it.

Ways to Use This Resource:

1. Print the version you wish to use:
*color or black and white
2. If you use the black and white version, kids can color in the pictures.
3. If you have a student who does not have a mom but has another female figure in their life, choose the second version for them and help them to write in the appropriate name (my aunt, my grandma, Jen, etc.)
4. Follow up and use the discussion starters to talk these amazing women. Learn more about women your students find most interesting.
5. Kids can write in one of the two writing prompts to show their understanding of the concept. The children who do not have a mom, can fill in the blank at the top of their writing prompts.

I am Kind to My Mom

Discussion Starters:

Why is it important to be kind to your mom?

How can you show kindness to your mom?

How is it kind to your mom when you listen to her? How does that show kindness?

Do you have to give a gift to be kind? What is your favorite gift to give your mom?

“Thank you” is using your manners. What would you want or need to thank your mom for? Are there things she gives you? Are there things she does for you? What other manners can you use with your mom to show her kindness?

How is being helpful to your mom an easy way to be kind to your mom? What is your favorite way to be a helper?

It's important to be kind to my mom because:
