Teaching Kindness is Essential.

When children don't feel welcomed, included, and physically and emotionally safe, they won't be able to learn. I'm Nicole Black and I create resources to help create a classroom community, to limit bullying behaviors, and to intentionally help kids speak and act with kindness more often.

Kindness can be taught. This resource will help you do it.

Ways to Use This Resource:

1. Print the version you wish to use:

*color or black and white

You can use all the pages, or choose a few for your students.

2. If you use the black and white version, kids can color in the pictures.

3. On the last page, kids can illustrate and write/dictate the last page. They can use “I” by circling “am” or a special woman in their life (mom, aunt, grandma, teacher, etc.) and circling “is.”

4. Follow up and use the discussion starters to talk these amazing women. Learn more about women your students find most interesting.

5. Kids can write in one of the two writing prompts to show their understanding of the concept.

Kind Women in History

Discussion Starters:

Which of these women have you heard about before?

What do you know about any of these women?

Why is it important to learn about women who are kind and inspiring and strong and brave and determined?

Which of these women would you like to learn more about?

Some pages say the woman “was kind” and some say the woman “is kind” and one page says “are kind.” Why do you think there’s a difference?

If we could add YOU to the book, what would you want to be known for?

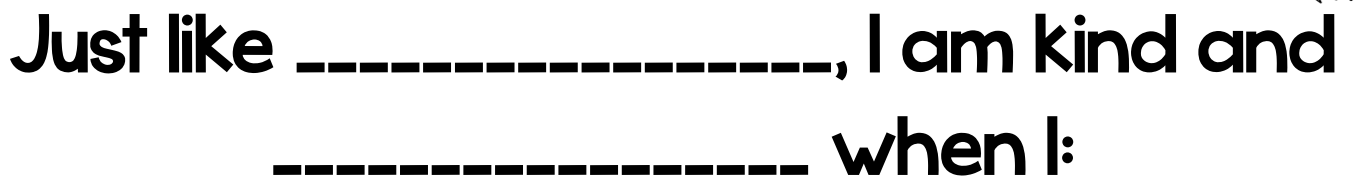

Can you be kind and loud, confident, bold, strong, ambitious, and passionate?
